—Carlisle Advocate: "The water supply is getting very low in this county on account of the continued dry weather. Stock water is scarce as well as drinking water. The dry weather is also telling on the wheat and rye. The grain which was sown late is doing no good. Tobacco is hanging in the barn awaiting a spell of wet weather to be stripped and delivered to the warehouse for market."

Mail Christmas Tricks Early.

Confusion will wait upon those who post their Christmas remembrances in time, says the shrewd old party who occupies the seat of government at Washington.

Dropping into the vernacular he has deigned to jostle the memory of the belated shopper by urging him to drop his bundles in the nearest mail box "early and avoid the rush."

The night before Christmas, which is so thrilling a time for most people, is a black night for the postman. He staggers under the burden of Atlas. For years he has been the victim of the eleventh hour shoppers who want the government to deliver their parcels at their destination on Christmas eve or Christmas morning. The postal officials have entered a plea in his behalf, and they are hoping, with the kindly co-operation of the public, to lighten his burden this year.

All those who can do so are requested to post their Christmas presents early with this warning printed on the outside wrapper:

"Don't open until Christmas"
The government urged this course upon the senders of gifts last year, but the scheme resulted in endless confusion and much complaint, because many wrote this warning on an inner wrapper instead of upon the cover.

Wherever this was done the parcel had to be sent at the first class rate, instead of at third or fourth class. This added tax upon the sender was needless and occasioned complaint.

Postal officials are once more making the appeal to those who are sending gifts with the warning not to print or stamp the caution about opening anywhere except on the outside. If this direction is followed no change in the rate will be made and the sender may be certain that his gift will reach its destination in plenty of time.

The Telltale Body.

A main fact in the history of manners is the wonderful expressiveness of the human body. If it were made of glass or of air and the thoughts were written on steel tablets within, it could not publish more truly its meaning than now. Wise men read very sharply all your private history in your look and gait and behavior. The whole economy of nature is bent on expression. The telltale body is all tongues.—Emerson.
